

Atmosphere Solutions Information Technology Services
Levels Playing Field for Small Businesses

Tempe, Ariz. [Jan. 14, 2007] – A small Phoenix-based law firm with just six employees, had neither the space nor the resources to employ a full-time IT professional to take care of its growing technology needs. The firm didn't know if it could afford to hire a full-service IT partner, yet it didn't want to be at the mercy of an individual IT "consultant" who might not have the experience or resources to keep it's business running smoothly.

"As attorneys, we work on deadlines all the time and often work seven days a week," says their happy client. "We needed to find a company we could trust that would respond immediately when we needed help."

Looking for the right balance between a huge IT services company and the ubiquitous "IT guy", the law firm turned to Tempe-based Atmosphere Solutions to manage its information technology needs. Atmosphere Solutions provides the law firm with affordable, around the clock maintenance and technical support, hardware and software advice, and has even performed a complex data conversion and analysis project.

"Just because you are a small business doesn't mean your information technology requirements are small," says Asha Wadher, president of Atmosphere Solutions. "A simple network outage or software issue could bring your entire business to a grinding halt."

Atmosphere Solutions offers a full range of services, including IT consulting, custom software development, networking administration, technical support, IT outsourcing management, and web hosting. The company's products and services are aimed at small to mid-size businesses such as law firms, banks, mortgage companies, hotels, accounting offices and more.

"Most small companies don't think they can afford to outsource their IT needs, so they either try to do it themselves or they hire a single person who never seems to be there when they need help," Wadher says. "But we leverage technology and the growing base of skilled specialists to make full-service support affordable. We also partner with the best in the business, including Microsoft and Dell."

Atmosphere Solutions, LLC is a technology solutions provider dedicated to developing creative, cost-effective solutions to clients throughout Metro Phoenix and its surrounding cities.
